

HEALTH SAVINGS ACCOUNTS

What is a Health Savings Account?

Commonly known as an “HSA,” a Health Savings Account is a tax-exempt custodial account established for the purpose of paying or reimbursing qualified medical expenses for you, your dependents or your spouse.

Who is eligible for an HSA?

You are eligible for a regular HSA contribution if:

- You are covered under a high-deductible health plan (HDHP).
- You are not also covered by any other health plan that is not an HDHP. There are certain exceptions for plans that provide for preventative care or other “permitted” coverage. Always check with your employer or health care provider for eligibility.
- You are not enrolled in Medicare.
- You are not a dependent on another person’s federal income tax return.

What are the federal tax benefits of having an HSA?

Employer contributions to your HSA may be excluded from your gross income. You can deduct contributions made by anyone other than your employer, as long as they don’t exceed the maximum annual contribution amount. Contributions remain in your account until you use them. The interest or earnings grow tax free and distributions for qualified medical expenses are also tax free. Your tax advisor or legal professional can provide guidance if you have questions.

Who can contribute to my HSA?

Once you have determined that you meet the eligibility requirements for an HSA, you, your employer, your family members and any other person may contribute to your HSA.

What are the contribution limits and deductible requirements for my HSA?

Contribution limits and deductible requirements are set by the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) each year. In addition, there is a limit on the “out-of-pocket” expenses that can be incurred during the tax year. Please refer to the IRS website to check limits and requirements: www.irs.gov. Your tax advisor or legal professional will also be able to help you if you have questions.

What are the HSA owner’s responsibilities?

Once you have determined if you are eligible, opening an HSA is much like opening a checking account. Experienced staff can guide you through the opening process. Each year, you determine your allowable annual HSA contribution and whether you have qualified medical expenses eligible for reimbursement with your nontaxable HSA distribution.

Your tax advisor or legal professional will be able to help you if you have questions.

How is the activity on my HSA reported?

Each year, we will report to the IRS the contributions made to your HSA account. We must also report the HSA distributions you take. As part of your federal income tax return, you will file IRS Form 8889 listing your contributions and distributions.
